Fanny Grace

A good showcase features a new act playing for folks who can give 'em a break.

I went to a great showcase the other night at Nashville's Douglas Corner, when the duo known as Fanny Grace - aka Paul Reeves and Carmen Mejia - rocked the club packed with heat-seeking execs from RCA, Warner Bros. and Universal South; reps from CMT and GAC (including Country Music Across America host Storme Warren and CRL host Suzanne Alexander); Grand Ole Opry general manager Charlie Monk; syndicated radio execs; and, yep, Country Weekly's photo editor Lisa Konicki and senior writer Wendy Newcomer. Fanny Grace wowed us all with their songs, including the new single "Wouldn't Have To" - written by Paul and hot-as-fire songwriter/producer Jeffrey Steele (who was also in the audience). Check out fanny-grace.com. Ya gotta love a duo named after a departed cat.

POP MUSIC REVIEW

Kings of Leon turn in a savage howler

The band's new album dominates a hypnotic Roxy show that's just bursting with the sound of angry young men.

By DEAN KUIPERS
Special to The Times

For all the mysterious Southern fragility that pervades the Kings of Leon's upcoming album, the band blew through its show at the Roxy on Saturday night with a lust and savagery that was utterly transforming.

The set was made up mostly of songs from the "Aha Shake Heartbreak" album, which will be released Feb. 22, but the Followills (three brothers and a cousin) found weighty, lead-bottomed live versions that went far past the CD's already beyond-garage evolution.

Gone is the band once referred to as "Lynyrd Strokes" for its Southern legacy and stripped-down sound. Kings of Leon now attack like the Who.

Frontman Caleb Followill's idiosyncratic delivery comes into its own on "Heartbreak." The band avoids stereotypes, which could easily be applied to its Southern members who grew up the sons of a traveling revival evangelist and wanted to claim full-throttle garage rock.

On the new songs, Followill's Tennessee drawl curls into an alien tongue, raspy and cracking, turning the word "star" on "The Bucket" to a clipped, swallowed "staw," and then transforms the "this party is over-rated" line from "Four Kicks" into "This pahtay is ovar-red-de."

The effect is hypnotic, the compressed sounds evoking an athletic feat, and the chopped, blunt verses on strange songs like "Razz" or "Pistol of Fire" pile image on image and refuse to coalesce.

But this nuance is obliterated live, as the songs become an explosive howl. The band has found a chiming bombast onstage. Introducing "Four Kicks," for instance, Followill made some rare between-song banter, noting this was a "fightin' song," then launched the band into a roaring version that proved the original rocker could be played as raw as punk.

The Kings of Leon that made their debut album, "Youth and Young Manhood," a few years back consisted of awkward kids who were battling labels like "Southern rock" and "pop" with equal ferocity. At the time, they were emerging from their strict upbringing to discover sex and a decadent, even profane freedom, and now they have fully emerged as angry young men with their own unique rock 'n' roll hybrid.

"Heartbreak" is just rotten with unflinching laments about girls with motel faces, drinking wine in the matinee and fighting at parties, but it is also about needing a new morality. These shortish, hard, sometimes brutal songs ring with authenticity, a rock sound and content that is for the Kings to own.

Baby Acts Ride On Nissan Ads

New Campaign Turns To Lesser-Known Talents To Target Cutting-Edge Audience

BY MICHAEL PAOLETTA

Nissan does not shy away from incorporating under-the-radar music into its TV ads. Recent spots for the automotive company featuring the music of Kinky and Ming + FS confirm this. But that's just the start.

On March 7, Nissan will debut three new TV spots for its Xterra model. The rugged ads, lensed by Josh Taft in Hawaii and Alaska, feature the music of the BellRays ("Revolution Get Down") Welsh outfit Stereophonics ("High as the Ceiling") and Norway's Span ("Stay As You Are").

For this campaign, Nissan North America worked directly with ad agency TBWA\Chiat\Day West, which in turn worked with music design company DeepMix and Universal Music responsible for finding the right music.

Curtin says he presented TBWA with about 50 tracks that captured the energy of Nissan Xterra's prime audience. "Because the ads are youthful and extreme-sports-oriented, we recommended music that captured this spirit," he says. "Alternative rock speaks to this audience."

Curtin's colleague, associate creative director Mike Yagi, concurs and adds, "We sell this upfront to the client. Xterra is young and hip—just like the music."

And for a rock band like Span, which is without a U.S. label, such national exposure has the potential to open state-side doors. "Having Span's music in this ad helps give the band a U.S. story, which could help in securing a U.S. deal,"

Publishing Group. According to Nissan manager of marketing, communications and integration Patricia Park, the three 30-second Xterra ads are geared toward active consumers in the 25-35 age bracket.

"This target audience is not into doing what everyone else is doing," Park says. "They like discovering new things and being on the cutting edge."

By using fresh and unexpected music from not-yet-mainstream acts, Nissan does not look like it is trying to buy fame.

Park adds, "Finding bands that are cool and undiscovered allows the consumer to do further research into Nissan and the [featured] music."

DeepMix music supervisor Dave Curtin and UMPG senior director of music for advertising, film and TV Tom Eaton were

How does Nissan get the extreme-sports loving 25-35 demographic interested in its Tierra model? Cool, alternative rock bands. Obscurity no obstacle. Acts hope the ads will make them obscure no more.

Eaton notes.

Span's "Stay As You Are" is from the band's 2004 Island U.K. album "Mass Distraction."

The BellRays' "Revolution Get Down" appears on the band's new album, "The Red, White & Black," which Alternative Tentacles Records released last month.

ANY EXPOSURE WELCOME

"High as the Ceiling" is culled from Stereophonics' last album, "You Gotta Go There to Come Back," which V2 issued two years ago. The band's new album, "Language. Sex. Violence. Other?," arrives March 29.

In the case of Stereophonics, even though the licensed track is from the act's previous album—and not the one the label is actively promoting—the added exposure is greeted with open arms.

"It all helps to spread the word about the band," V2 marketing director Debbie Chertock explains. "Having your music showcased in TV ads or shows has become one more avenue in which to get your music heard."

TBWA assistant producer Kyle Wright puts it another way: "There is a big difference between the number of people watching TV commercials and those that know about these bands. Like radio and iTunes, TV ads are another 'channel' to learn about new music."

Indeed, Nissan will do its part to help people connect the dots between the music heard in the ads and the bands themselves.

Beginning in March, Nissan's Web site (nissanusa.com) will offer information about each band, including bios, tour dates and retail links.

Links to each band's official Web site are also part of the plan.

"It does the band no good if they remain a best-kept secret," Yagi says. "This way, people logging on to Nissan's site learn about them."

In this way, V2's Chertock notes, Nissan is offering labels marketing value.

"People see the ad and go to Nissan's site to find out about the car and the music," she says. "Once there, they'll find links to the labels and artists—and vice versa. This is synergy at work."

Windswept Holdings

Evan Medow, CEO

Billboard 2004 Publishing Corporation Ranking: Hot 100

(No. 7); Hot R&B/Hip-Hop (No. 7)

In looking at Windswept's past success, CEO Evan Medow concedes that the company has never focused on writers who also are recording artists. Rather, he says, "our forte has always been writers or writer/producers or catalog deals."

This year, however, Windswept looks to develop a number of newly signed artist/writers for whom it has already secured recording deals.

In 2004, Windswept writers were credited on Hot 100 hits including "Yeah!", performed by Usher featuring Lil Jon & Ludacris; "The Way You Move," recorded by OutKast featuring Sleepy Brown; and "Goodies," released by Ciara featuring Petey Pablo. Those were the top three hits that led to Windswept's No. 7 position on the Hot 100 Publishing Corporation and Hot R&B/Hip-Hop Publishing Corporation recaps.

While it seeks to strengthen its artist/writer roster, Windswept will continue promoting its properties through the proven promotional tool of catalog compilations.

In this regard, Medow notes,

"the most significant thing we've done recently is our eight-CD sampler." The comprehensive set includes songs from the Windswept catalog as well as the Hitco and Trio/Quartet catalogs.

"That's something that most publishers aren't doing anymore, mostly because of cost and probably the belief that the Internet and music searches are taking the place of samplers," Medow says. "I think that's wrong. At the risk of sounding like a dinosaur, I think people like to get things—like well-designed packages that contain great music."

On of those, Medow says, is Windswept's "What's Hot" compilation series of recent and upcoming material from the catalogs. It regularly supplies these compilations to prospective music users.

Regarding current business challenges, Medow maintains that the biggest issue for Windswept, like other publishers, is fundamental: respect for copyright.

"We have to educate people that when they download a song or record for free, they're not supporting the system creating it," he says. "Ultimately, this will lead to a lessening in the quality of the material that's available for them to listen to."

While technology has enabled the abuse of copyrights through peer-to-peer file sharing, Windswept is among those publishing companies that are embracing technology to strengthen their in-house systems.

"We've digitized virtually our entire music library," Medow says. "We're just trying to make sure that our writers get attention paid to them. But the most important thing is creating good music. We can have the best royalty system in the world, but if what we're putting into it is of little creative value, it's not music publishing, but a good royalty system."

Beanie Sigel has long been Roc-a-Fella's subtle lyrical assassin. Not as flamboyant as Kanye West or as lauded as Jay-Z, his hardcore tales of street life are often as vivid and gut-wrenching as any in hip-hop today. That has never been clearer than it is on "Feel It in the Air." The melancholy tune, produced by Heavy D, samples Raphael Havenscroft's "Whole Lotta Something Goin' On" and carries a weight that is palpable as Sigel senses that something is about to happen. The Philadelphia MC conveys a real sense of urgency and paranoia with lines like, "Something going on, I feel funny/Can't tell me nothing different/My nose twitching." With the recent departure of Roc-a-Fella head Damon Dash and Sigel's current incarceration, it will be interesting to see how radio and fans respond to the single. However, with songs like this and "The B. Coming," due in April, Sigel may finally have his day.—RH

Kings Of Leon Set Out To Extend Reign To U.S.

BY BRIAN GARRITY

For Kings of Leon, fame is a relative thing.

The four-piece rock outfit from Tennessee has achieved platinum sales in the United Kingdom, where the group is a bona fide sensation. The band served as the penultimate act at last summer's Glastonbury Festival, and it counts rock royalty like Mick Jagger, Bono and Elton John among its fans.

However, in its hometown of Nashville and elsewhere in the United States, the band continues to toil in semi-obscurity as it waits on its first North American hit.

"Fame is where you are," Kings of Leon drummer Nathan Followill says. "Obviously we would love to be huge in America, but we've had a blast touring the world, and we've already sold more records than we ever dreamed we would."

The band—a family affair comprising Followill, his brothers Caleb (vocals/rhythm guitar) and Jared (bass) and cousin Matthew (lead guitar)—is about to take its second shot at breaking in the United States with the Feb. 22 release of "Aha Shake Heartbreak" (RCA), the critically hailed follow-up to 2003's "Youth and Young Manhood."

Based on early indications, Kings of Leon's stateside profile may be about to change.

The band landed the much-coveted opening slot on the spring leg of U2's tour that kicks off in March. In addition, influential alternative radio stations in Los Angeles, Boston, Seattle, San Diego and Portland, Ore., have been early champions of the album's first single, "The Bucket," by picking it up ahead of the track's Jan. 31 radio impact date.

With a headlining club tour of its own in February, a 15-page photo spread in Rolling Stone's spring fashion issue and TV dates on "Late Show With David Letterman" and "Late Night With Conan O'Brien" pending, RCA executives hope Kings of Leon will establish a stronger connection with American audiences.

To be sure, expectations at RCA are running high as the challenge to break the band in the States is formidable. The label reports it has sold 765,000 million copies of "Youth and Young Manhood" around the world, including more than 408,000 units in the United Kingdom, while "Aha Shake Heartbreak" has sold more than 270,000 units in the U.K. alone since its release in November.

By contrast, "Youth" sold 122,000 units in the United States, according to Nielsen SoundScan.

"It's our goal to get them to a place as big here as they are in the U.K., which sounds funny because they are an American band," RCA marketing director Brad Oldham says.

Kings

The label is looking to use the exposure from the U2 tour slot (secured after the two bands appeared on a British TV program late last year) to further build the act's radio profile, something the group struggled with the last time out.

RCA senior VP of A&R Steve Ralbovsky says that with "Youth and Young Manhood" the band was pejoratively characterized as too Southern rock or too garage or too much like the Strokes, or some combination of the three.

"It was an anathema to most of your modern rock programmers. They would say, 'This just isn't the sound of my radio station,'" he says. "This time around it feels like our presentation is stronger and radio is more receptive."

RCA's pitch is bolstered by rapturous advance reviews for "Aha Shake Heartbreak." The band—which is managed by Ken Levitan and Andy Mendelsohn of Vector Management and published by Windswept Music—again worked with producer Ethan Johns (Ryan Adams, Ben Kweller) and received co-production from songwriter/producer Angelo.

"We definitely knew going into it that we were much further along as musicians than on 'Youth and Young Manhood,'" Nathan Followill says. "With the first record we were just happy to get through a song without messing up. This record we knew what we wanted."

Dance music stars search for another spin

What do you do when the stardust fades? For electronic dance music, that off-posed question doesn't seem exactly relevant—the 21st century can't seem to hawk a car without it, after all. But for groups that actually embodied a pop moment, career-sinking jitters can set in. Ten years after they emerged as French house music's paterfamilias, Daft Punk represent an idealized time for fans who've since traded in pills for prams. And they spend a decent chunk of their first album in four years taking half-hearted stabs at their former glories.

Most notably, "Television Rules the Nation" siphons off the compressed, tooth-rattling bass from brilliant singles like "Da Funk," and the title track riffs off old-school filter-house like "Musique," layering distorted guitar riffs and squelched vocals for a jacked-up bounce. Yet, where 2001's Discovery coyly gene-spliced cock rock and New York garage, Human merely cuts and pastes: On the lead single, "Robot Rock," they noisily heist the synth riff from Breakwater's 1980 funk jam "Release the Beast" and call it a day.

Fischerspooner have a much tougher job for their second record. As the face of New York's '80s-pilfering electroclash scene (circa 2003), they're trying to rise above a genre that's lapsed into a hipster punch line. You sense the dilemma in songs like "Wednesday," on which frontman Casey Spooner sings, "I feel like I'm still there," as if he's stuck in an existential time warp. But Fischerspooner have actually worked on the problem, experimenting with prog rock and punk—check the psychedelic flourishes on their cover of the Boredoms' "Circle"—and beefing up their songwriting with the help of Linda Perry, French house producer/Madonna muse Mirwais, and, mind-bogglingly, the late writer/intellectual Susan Sontag. "Everything to Gain" taps the stuttering keyboard intro to "Baba O'Riley" before spiraling off into an epic rock-opera fantasy, and the poppy "All We Are" plays off P.L.U.R. bromides with a wink and a sigh. Infusing their music with real personality and humor, sexiness and humility, they've neatly transcended the air-quote graveyard.
